

The Allies captured 70 square miles of land.	The Generals kept on sending men over the top. The men kept getting killed.
Bloodiest battle in the history of the British Army. 60,000 British men died on the first day	The battle gave the French a chance to recover from the defeat in their battle
Not much land gained.	A lot of the Tanks got stuck in the mud and never started fighting
The Tanks scared the Germans. The British used them after in other battles.	Some men had run across no man's land instead of walking and so more had survived. The soldiers were told to run in battles after this
The Germans lost a lot of soldiers.	War still not ended

The Allies captured 70 square miles of land.	The Generals kept on sending men over the top. The men kept getting killed.
Bloodiest battle in the history of the British Army. 60,000 British men died on the first day	The battle gave the French a chance to recover from the defeat in their battle
Not much land gained.	A lot of the Tanks got stuck in the mud and never started fighting
The Tanks scared the Germans. The British used them after in other battles.	Some men had run across no man's land instead of walking and so more had survived. The soldiers were told to run in battles after this
The Germans lost a lot of soldiers.	War still not ended